

Hi All

Guess who is now an 'International' Psychic Medium? Yes, Moi!!!!

As most of you know I went to the UK in July with my daughter. Part business, part pleasure. Met up with my family and reminisced, ate all the bad stuff I love including pies, sweets, Chinese food (with the MSG – tasty!) and my favourite – Farley's Rusks with hot milk every day for my brekky!! Weird I know, but look what I do for a living!!!!

I did a few shows, which were received well. People wanted more and you know me, I wanted to do more, but I was supposed to be having a holiday as well. I'll go back to do shows.

I also went to spend some time with David in Portsmouth. We had a great time.

I had a ball, but was greeted by some sad news about my friend's daughter, Justine, who has been diagnosed with cancer and only has a few months to live. She is a widowed young mum with 5 kids. No money! So we are doing out bit down under and having a Lifting the Veil show on the 24th October at Joondalup Reception Centre to raise money for her. Rob and Kate from the Joondalup Reception Centre have kindly donated the hire of the Centre free of charge that night so ALL proceeds will be going to Justine and her family. We have already raised $250 by holding raffles at Anam Cara. Please pass the word round 'cause I want this show to be a sell out.

I have included a photo of Justine and an article that was in the paper just to give you more information. There is a website in the process of being constructed which will be helpful.

Other news

Tracyann's Anam Cara Healing is up and running. Very successful and obviously much needed. Check the website for dates.

I have put together 3 different workshops catering from absolute beginners to potential Mediums. I will assign dates when I have the numbers, so if you are interested please book in for them.

So that's it for now. Hope everyone is ok. Watch this space for some very exciting new in the next newsletter.

Luv

Donna

Tragic mum-of-five told she has 6 months to live

Vanessa Cornall

July 17, 2009

GREAT mum: Justine Hargreaves with her children Coral Davis, five, Crystal Davis, five, Nathaniel Davis, seven, Sam Davis, eight, and Jade Hargreaves.

A CANCER-stricken mother-of-five who faced bankruptcy and homelessness in the wake of her partner's suicide has been told she has less than six months to live.

Justine Hargreaves was told her home would be repossessed while she was battling cervical cancer in April 2008 and trying to rebuild her life after partner Stuart Davis died.

Justine found Stuart, 36, hanging from a belt at their then home in Seathwaite Way, Huncoat, while he was suspected to be suffering from bipolar disorder, also known as manic depression.

Mr Davis, who was a self-employed cabinet-maker and a special constable in Manchester, had cancelled all the family's direct debit payments at Christmas 2005, including all their life insurance policies and loan repayments.

He kept the fact hidden and it was only after his death in November 2006 when the debts came to light, when it was too late to sort out the debt.

But, after the Observer publicised her plight, she was offered help from social landlord, Hyndburn Homes and was given a new home in Chester Street, Accrington for her and her children Jade, 16, Sam, eight, Nathaniel, seven and five-year-old twins Coral and Crystal.

Following the move, life looked to be getting better as news regarding her cancer seemed positive, until recently when she was told the cancer had spread to her bones and glands.

This week, Justine was bravely trying to come to terms with the devastating news of her terminal illness.

She said: "I am absolutely devastated. I am desperately trying to plan things for my children's future that I will never experience, it's heartbreaking. The children are so young, it's not fair they should now lose their mum as well as their dad.

"When Stuart died, I promised the boys that I would never leave them and that is exactly what I'm doing. I can't believe I am letting them down like this.

"They have been through so much and in their naivety they just don't understand. The twins will come up to me daily and say 'Mummy are you dying?'

"The only way I can keep strong now is to do my best to make them financially secure ,which is extremely hard with everything that has happened in the last couple of years."

She added: "Normally, I would have tried to keep these last few months private, but for the my children's sake I can't. I am going to focus on making their futures great and make memories that will stay with them forever."

Six weeks after Stuart's death the family was hit by another tragedy when Justine's 73-year-old father lost his fight against bowel cancer. Justine is now hoping a family member will be able to take in the children when she dies.

Remember – You can do your bit.

Lifting the Veil show

24th October 2009 @ Joondalup Reception Centre, Boas Ave, Joondalup

See you there!! X